

Appropriate clothing in Indigenous communities

Clothing whilst on placement

When packing your bag think:

- Is it culturally appropriate?
- Is it appropriate for the climate?
- Is it too heavy or bulky?
- Does it provide protection from sharps, sunburn, snakes, spiders and scratches?

We highly recommend you wear modest clothing, which will cover thighs, tops of arms and midriff. Remember that you are a guest on Aboriginal land and it is important to dress appropriately in a way, which will not offend. In Aboriginal culture the exposure of thighs, groins (and sometimes upper arms) may be considered promiscuous or offensive.

Do wear:

- Loose-fitting and long styles (below the knee) of the following: shorts, skirts, pants, trousers or dresses;
- Loose shirts or t-shirts with sleeves;
- Bring a hat, pair of old sandshoes, old shirt & longish shorts in case you are invited to go camping or fishing (this is usually for those on remote community placements)
- If you are invited swimming you may swim with your clothes on, or t-shirt and shorts covering your swimming costume;
- You may be invited to sit on the ground, so wear clothes that will not cause embarrassment or discomfort in such a situation;
- Cotton garments, rather than synthetic fibers, are recommended as they allow the skin to breathe.

Do not wear:

- Tight figure-hugging clothing e.g. no tight jeans, hipsters, skirts;
- See-through clothing; or
- Clothing that exposes too much e.g. no boob tubes, bikinis, speedos, tight rugby shorts, immodest singlet (with low cleavage and large armholes), halter necks, high side-splits, low cleavage-exposing tops, miniskirts.

Examples of appropriate clothing

YAPA (sister in Yolŋu matha)

WAWA (brother in Yolŋu Matha)